I like your choice of colours and filters in this draft as they really go with this songs genre. The close up shots of various bugs, snakes and the lobster are really creepy which again works really well with this songs genre. I know this is very picky but there is a moment in 0.30-0.31 where the legs of a spider suddenly appear. It's way too quick; therefore, I think you should probably either take it out or extend the clip.

I really like the transitions and distortion effects used, and I think the framing of the shots is excellent. I think the video matches the song well and there was no problems with timings/lip syncing noticed. One thing which I thought looked off was the shot starting 1:40 with the guitarist, I felt that you lost the energy you had been building before hand due to it's length. Maybe include some cuts to the drummer to liven it up?

good stuff: -variety of shots
-editing and fade in effects

bad stuff: - have either b&w or colour/ make more psychedelic ~~also, the kitty is way too cute ^^~~

Really cool intro, love all the black and white shots of cool insects, water dripping etc works awesome with the genre, some of the cross faded shots are cool for example with on the guitarists face and guitar some didn't work so well like the faded shot of him working, getting a shot of snake in the grass is bad ass awesome idea of either going to an aquarium to get these shots/finding some one who had these and bleeding them in to the music video. All the black white shots are well graded (nice contrast) the shots of the band playing are on a little long/are too stable, so either shorten them so they are nice quick cuts with the music or use shots with more movement, shots of the singer with the vintage style microphone are cool for example at 1:19 good composition

You have used a good range of shots and have interesting angles. The fade from some of the shots look good. The colour of the spiders and bugs are good but you could make the perfromace colour more psychedelic. The coloured performance is more intresting.
