Charli has been labelled as the leading male artist of 2019, for his recent headline grabbing success at changing the game of pop all within the space of just one year. Charli has always been passionate about music and performing, this is highlighted by his early career before he became famous in the world of wider music and the media. Music has been close to Charli's heart starting out at the tender age of 4 when he took to the stage in amateur performances and then went onto win coveted roles on the West End stage from the age of 14. These began with very minor roles however he eventually grew into some of the most famous leading roles in the West End including Wicked, Matilda the Musical, Mamma Mia! however as you will find out, Charli has designs on even more fame and fortune.

How did you deal with the pressure of your overwhelming success?

My success and fame hit me like a ton of bricks! I never expected how it would all pan out. It all started when my friend posted a video of me showing her my song called falling, my song called falling, which was actually the song that brought attention to me and the first single I published. I created and it blew up from there. People found the video and asked me to release the song I had created. I believe that because my career lifted off so quickly I never had time to process it so I think I never had time to deal with the pressure; it kind of just fueled me to go bigger and get better!

How do you keep your music unique and do you think you have changed the way people look at the genre of pop?

I don't think I've changed the pop genre I think I've given it a new feel, a more refreshed version. Many people do say that my music is very unique however, I just think it's my style so it's true to who I am, that clearly makes me a unique person! However, all jokes aside I like to experiment with my music and create different sounds and beats that are unusual and that people haven't heard before, this keeps people interested as its not mainstream and its different to what they are hearing all the time.
