

Top ten tips for life from the perspective of an anarchic punk

1. Don't let the people in your life make your decisions

The people in your life may be important but you shouldn't let them affect your opinions or decisions. A good example of this is politicians some are worse than others but all persist the idea of infecting your mind with their opinions telling you how to think

2. You can do what you want

The biggest myth the government tries to seed into your head is that as a regular member of society you have to go to work every day to pay of the mortgage you have to pay for your house while raising your two kids before inevitably you end up with a divorce and two kids who don't want to speak to you, the fact most people don't realise you're not bound to your current situation and you can do anything you please and go anywhere you want it just has to be your decision.

3. Being an anarchist doesn't mean being a dick, in all for overthrowing a tyrannical government but the regular working class bloke doesn't deserve to be verbally assaulted because you consider yourself punk, politicians and the general public are very different people, that being said you still need to stand up for yourself none should be able to walk over you or at least they

4. Don't let the idea of anarchy or any political ideology take over, it may be important but it's not yours or anyone else's only call to action everyone has friends family lives outside of the movement and it's important to remember that, all energy can't be focused on something you hate because then the anger and hate takes over and no political movement is worth your soul or your no worse than what you're fighting against
