

SETTING THE PATHWAY

CHEMMY & BAILS GOING THEIR OWN WAY

The United States, the home of Indie and R&B music culture, is laying claim to having nurtured the world's most renowned and successful band, 'Old Shoes'.

The band originated in Nevada, and the girls are all only aged 19 - a young age to be successful as a world famous outfit. However, it was recently announced that two of the band members, Chemmy and Bails, have decided to break away from the mothership. In this month's edition of Quill, they share their life stories, and in particular, how they have coped with working within the music business and performing on some of the most prominent stages worldwide.

Quill met up with Chemmy and Bails as they took part in a recent recording session where it was clear the vocals the girls were producing would be able to match those of Old Shoes. The duo have such talent and Quill cannot wait to follow their career and their journey with them every step of the way.

LEAVING THE MOTHER SHIP

THIS IS IT!

In our conversation it was clear that the girls felt as though it was best for them to leave the girl band because it was physically and mentally affecting Chemmy and Bails significantly due to constant negative trolling on social media.

The split meant that they took themselves away from social media completely; deleting apps and reducing the amount of social interaction. In spite of this the physical paparazzi have bombarded the girls on multiple occasions since leaving the band, leaving them mortified and exhausted by the backlash.

They went on to tell me that.... Having felt that fleeing the country would be allowing the trolls to win, they are remaining strong in their determination to carry on with their duet, which Quill can exclusively reveal is called 'Revealing All'. Make sure you buy next month's edition of Quill where you will be able to be updated on their future plans for the group and how the girls are getting on post leaving the girl band.
